Veterinary Notes by Rev. Mehitabel
I is for Insects. (part A)

As far as dogs and cats are concerned there are 4 main arthropod pests – fleas, ticks, mites and lice. These can cause irritation and allergy in their own right, and may also act as vectors for disease.

Fleas: Ctenocephalides felis

Fleas are a common insect parasite of dogs and cats. It is important to remember that they spend the greatest part of their life cycle in your carpet as eggs and larvae, and that for any flea on the animal you have 10s to 100s in your furnishings. The life cycle is adult flea – egg – larvae – pupa – adult flea. So if you do find that you have a flea problem, always remember to treat the house as well as the animal, and also remember that the vacuum cleaner is a perfect enemy of fleas providing you go into all the nooks and crannies and underneath the furniture. That said, fleas are easily controlled and avoided. A good test to check for the presence of fleas is to brush the animal over a piece of wet, white paper. If any of the dust specks dissolve to give a reddish brown stain, then fleas are present as this is the flea excreta. You may also find “pepper and salt” where the animal is lying, in other words pearly white flea eggs and brown/black flea excreta. There are many products on the market for flea control, and most include some form of insect inhibitor that prevents the flea breeding. Most are in a “spot-on” format which makes administration easy. Please take care when using them and do not use dog preparations on cats as this can be fatal. My personal preference is those based on the avermectin group of drugs as these also have an action on internal parasites (with the exception of tapeworms) and so avoid the need for regular worming. I would advise against flea collars as they are (a) less effective and (b) likely to cause very unpleasant skin reactions. If your animal is prone to acquiring fleas begin treating them with a spot-on in early spring and continue through till first frosts, otherwise I would suggest treating when there is a need but do remember to keep a close check using the paper test described above at regular intervals. I will describe disease associated with the parasites in a subsequent article

Ticks:

Ixodes ricinus is the most common tick encountered. It is in the same group as spiders, and has 4 pairs of legs. Its preferred host is the sheep and deer but it will latch on to any other warm blooded creature even though it cannot breed using their blood. It has an interesting life cycle. The adult tick lays an enormous number of eggs. These hatch the following year into the first stage nymph which feeds in the spring and then lies dormant till it emerges as a second stage nymph the following year. This feeds in the spring and then lies in the pasture till the following year when it emerges as the adult form for the final feed before mating and laying eggs. On the animal they appear as blue-black balloons that slowly enlarge as they fill with blood until they eventually drop off. The head of the tick is buried into the skin which makes removal tricky. Please do not try removing them with petrol or lighted cigarettes. Instead, unless the tick is on an eyelid or round the eye which does need veterinary assistance, grip the body firmly close to the head with either your fingers or a pair of tweezers and gently twist and pull. There are now some useful little tick hooks available for this purpose, and it is worth taking these out with you on walks with your dog. Danger times for ticks are the spring rise in April/May; and a second smaller tick rise in September/October. If your dog is walked in a tick area there are some spot-on preparations that guard against ticks and it is worth using these regularly from March till late October. Remember to keep your legs protected too!

Next week – mites and lice

Dalai Lama May Appoint Successor

The Dalai Lama says he may appoint a successor or rely on an election before his death in a break with tradition, a Japanese newspaper reported Tuesday, following recent orders that China must approve Tibet's spiritual leaders.

According to centuries of Tibetan Buddhist tradition, the search for the reincarnation of spiritual leaders, or lamas — including the Dalai Lama — has been carried out by Tibetan monks following the leaders' deaths. "The Tibetan people would not support a successor selected by China after my death," the Dalai Lama was quoted as saying on a trip to Japan by the Sankei Shimbun, a national daily.

"If the Tibetan people wish to uphold the Dalai Lama system, one possibility would be to select the next Dalai Lama while I am still living," he was quoted as saying in an interview.

"Among options being considered are a democratic selection by the high monks of Tibetan Buddhism, or the appointment of a successor by myself," he said.

The exiled leader also accused Chinese authorities of stepping up persecution of Tibetan monks and civilians, and called the region's relations with the Chinese government "the most tense in recent years," according to the newspaper.

China's new order, which came into force in September, states that all future lama appointments related to Tibetan Buddhism "must get government approval," according to the official Xinhua News Agency. It also prevents any outside source from having "influence" in the selection process, the agency reported. The order has led to concerns that the central government may forcibly select a pro-Beijing leader once the current popular Dalai Lama is dead. China has ruled Tibet with a heavy hand since its Communist-led forces invaded in 1951, and it has accused the Buddhist monk of defying its sovereignty by pushing for Tibetan independence.

The Tibetan government-in-exile in Dharmasala, India, regards the Chinese order as an attempt to further repress and undermine the religious culture of the Himalayan region. In 1995, the Dalai Lama chose 6-year-old Gendun Choekyi Nyima as the 11th Panchen Lama, the most exalted figure of Tibetan Buddhism after the Dalai Lama. The boy and his family disappeared soon after and have not been heard from since.

China's communist-led government later named Gyaltzen Norbu as the 11th Panchen Lama and said Nyima and his family were being kept in a secret location for their protection.

The Dalai Lama says he wants "real autonomy" for Tibet, not independence. He has lived with followers in exile in India since fleeing Chinese soldiers in 1959.

He arrived in Japan last week for a nine-day visit. He has been snubbed by Japanese officials, who are working to improve relations with neighboring China.

The Order of Web Weavers Crystal Web Mapping Project

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalog your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly cataloged we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,
The Order of Web Weavers
