Today's Featured Temple

Living Stones

Memorial Shrine

Chartered 5 March, Year 6 Aquarius

Shrine Sigil

The Living Stones Memorial Shrine was started to commemorate those we love who have passed through the veil. A place to honour our Ancestors and celebrate their lives.

We also have an animal section for those furry familiars and soul mates we have lost to the Goddess and wish to have remembered.

Once a month we hold Memorial Rituals in the rituals room on the last Friday of each month at 9pm UK time.

We also have the Eternal Flame memorial book for those of you who prefer to have a short memorial insert.

- A contemplation room is provided if you wish to stay a while.
- Links to how to cope with the death of a loved one.
- A place to leave your messages or poems
- And inclusions forms for the rituals and memorial pages.

Veterinary Notes – D is for diarrhoea (part a)
By Rev. Mehitabel

Gastrointestinal upsets are one of the commonest problems encountered in dogs and cats and I'll discuss some of the most common. It is a massive topic and so I shall spread this article over two weeks dealing with acute (sudden onset) causes this week and chronic (slow and persistent) causes next week

It is important to realise is that dogs (and cats) vomit very easily and a single bout of vomiting in an otherwise healthy animal is rarely a cause for concern. Both vomiting and diarrhoea should be regarded simply as a clinical sign of a disease and not as a diagnosis in their own right. Nausea is often a prelude to vomiting and is characterised by a lot of licking of lips and excess salivation.

Acute vomiting & Diarrhoea

- Over excitement (dogs) – usually characterised by regurgitation of relatively undigested food which is often re-eaten. Some bitches may also regurgitate food for their pups.
- Travel sickness (usually dogs) - this can often be treated simply using anticholinergic drugs that don't cause sleepiness.
- Dietary upset (dogs and cats) – after over-eating, consuming rich food, eating something “delicious (!)” that they find outside or a change in diet. This is usually self-limiting and rarely needs treatment.
- Gastritis (inflammation of the stomach lining) caused by infections such as distemper, parvo-virus, and coronaviruses in dogs and feline enteritis in cats as well as by a host of other bacteria and viruses in both species. Treatment usually involves antibiotics and drugs to stop the vomiting and slow the passage of material through the gut. Although there are few infectious diseases that do pass between humans and pets, some of the commonest food poisoning bacteria such as campylobacter may spread in either direction so good hygiene is essential. Gastritis in cats may be due to furballs which tend to be regurgitated eventually. Liquid paraffin or a high fibre diet can help to move fur on through the gut.
- Foreign bodies – such as stones, rubber toys, sticks etc. in the stomach or small intestine. Common in Labradors and other breeds that love chewing things that they shouldn't

In the absence of obvious causes which need to be managed appropriately, treatment of acute vomiting and diarrhoea is initially symptomatic, aiming to suppress the overactivity of the gut through use of anti-emetics and anti-spasmodic agents, plus rehydration either by mouth or via an intravenous drip. Antibiotics may be indicated. It is best to withhold food till the vomiting stops and then to give small amounts of easily digested meals such as boiled chicken or fish. In severe vomiting remove the water-bowl but allow the dog just a couple of laps every 30 minutes. This stops them draining the bowl in one go and precipitating more vomiting. Boiling and then cooling the water is another trick – dogs dislike the taste and so tend not to over-drink. Cats are more likely to refuse food and water, so here give them small quantities 5 – 10ml of water every hour and then liquidised food every 3 hours until their appetite returns.

Age shall not wither them: the oldest trees on Earth by Tangi Quemener

SCHULMAN GROVE, California (AFP) - They have neither the soaring majesty nor the celebrity of the giant redwood, but in one respect the bristlecone pine is the undisputed king of trees: longevity. Scattered on a remote mountainside of eastern California, these gnarled, twisted specimens are the oldest living organisms on Earth, the most senior among them some 4,700 years old.

If the mere sight of trees that pre-date the ancient Pyramids of Giza is not enough to take the breath away, the hour-long trek to reach them is: these natural wonders are found at a rarified altitude of 3,300 meters. The bristlecone's astounding durability is partly explained by the harsh climate that they have endured throughout the ages, according to Patti Wells, a US Forest Service naturalist, who has studied the trees for 37 years

In the summer, the trees bask in temperatures of 25 degrees Celsius, but in winter they are frozen in bone-chilling sub-zero temperatures that can reach minus 30 degrees. Roaring winds of 320 kph (200 mph) pummel the forest, which is also blanketed in snow up to three meters deep. Only the bristlecone is able to withstand such extreme conditions, botanists say. The reasons are partly to do with the tree's unique make-up and unforgiving location.

Because the trees grow slowly, they have developed an impervious resinous wood, protecting them from insect infestations and mushrooms. The high altitude of the forest also means that potentially devastating fires in the region don't have as much oxygen to feed them, Wells said. At first glance bristlecone pines often appear to be dead. As the tree ages outer layers of bark die, leaving only a strip of connective tissue stretching from the roots to the few branches that remain alive. The deadwood of "Pinus Longevae" is so solid that it does not rot.

Yet despite the bristlecone's proven resilience to the elements, park officials are more wary of the dangers to the trees posed by man. The numbers of tourists who come to visit the forest every year are relatively small -- around 60,000 a year -- and forestry officials want to keep it that way. "We don't make any effort to make it well known," Wells said. "We don't want it to become like Yosemite because it would be damaged."

The location of the oldest tree in the forest, "Methuselah", said to be over 5,000 years old, is kept secret in order to protect it. It follows an incident in 1964 when another tree, "Prometheus," was cut down by a geologist.

The fact that the trees date back several millennia have also enabled scientists to make significant improvements in the field of dendrochronology, or the study of tree rings. Regarded as the most reliable measure of dating, where one tree ring corresponds to one year, it has allowed scientist to re-calibrate the common carbon dating scale known as "Carbon 14."

Several historical doctrines, such as the notion that all civilization began in ancient Mesopotamia, have been invalidated as a result of the improvements to the scale based on studies of the bristlecone.

The Order of Web Weavers Crystal Web Mapping Project

The Order of the Web Weavers has been working diligently on mapping the Crystal Web. If any of you have a crystal that you have added or removed from the Crystal Web contact us to ensure are records up to date and accurate.

The information we need in order to best catalog your crystal/s is the following. Your Craft Name and E-mail Address along with your City, State, Country, Latitude, and Longitude. Sent to the following e-mail address: wwcw@correllianorders.info

Please include the above information, if you have removed your crystal from the Crystal Web along with 'Remove' in the subject line. If you have added several crystals then we would need a separate entry for each crystal, unless they are located together. If they are located together then please include how many crystals are at that location.

We are excited about this project and hope that you will be too. Once the crystals have been properly cataloged we can then begin placing them on the map program. This will give us a good visualization on the Crystal Web. Thank you in advance for your participation in this wonderful project.

Bright Blessings,

The Order of Web Weavers
